Dear President Yuichiro Anzai,
Distinguished guests and colleagues,

First of all, on behalf of Fudan University, I'd like to extend the sincere congratulations to Keio University for the 150th anniversary. Sticking to the principle of "pen and ink are stronger than knife and sword" and the guideline of "independence and self-respect", Keio University, one of the most prestigious universities in Japan, has trained numerous outstanding talents in all walks of life and contributed to the rapid development of the Japanese society in the post-war era. Aiming at nurturing the leaders of future, Keio University has made new achievements in various fields. Now Keio University can proudly look back at its 150 years of great academic, technological and scientific achievements with which it has won wide recognition both in Japan and cross the world.

Keio University and Fudan University have shared long-standing friendship and close cooperation. Over the past few years, the exchanges and collaboration between us have demonstrated great momentum of development. In 2007, the branch office of "Keio University Center for East Asian Studies" was established at Fudan, which is another signal of the close tie between us. I believe with the deepening of China's reform and opening up and the further development of Sino-Japanese relations, the cooperation between Keio and Fudan will be enhanced to a higher and more productive level in the future.

Dear President Yuichiro Anzai, ladies and gentlemen, once again, please allow me to convey our sincere congratulations and wish you all great success in the future.

Thank you.
